When will they build "Discovery Bay" and "Dumbo Circus" in Disneyland?
Sincerely,

Those two attractions are two of several potential plans currently being considered but presently "on hold." The next time you visit Disneyland, a tour of the Preview Center on Main Street will enlighten you on any new developments on these two projects. — Ed.

Sirs:

Why not an entire page of "Letters to the Editor?"
Sincerely,
Alicia Neyhause
Pinole, CA

At times, we've been able to accommodate a full page of letters, but at other times, we utilize the space to alert Magic Kingdom Club members to important news from the Club. — ED.

Sirs:

Are you going to print an article about Discovery Bay in the future?
Sincerely,
Tim Benham

We will certainly keep our readers informed on this project when plans are approved and construction begins. In the meantime, see answer to another query on this new attraction elsewhere on this page. — ED.

Shop in New Orleans Square Lives Up To Its Name

"One-of-a-Kind" Antiques

Tucked away between the Pirates of the Caribbean entrance and the Cafe Orleans in the charming setting of New Orleans Square in Disneyland is an enticing shop that sometimes proves to be a surprise to Park visitors. It seems almost incredible that a shop full of select antique furniture and accessories could be located right in the middle of a bustling theme park.

Experienced buyers of precious items for the antique shops in both Disneyland and Walt Disney World search worldwide for pieces of "good design, exceptional craftsmanship, authenticity and an intangible thing . . . personality." From imports and estate auctions, they acquire treasures ranging from giant ceramic sentry-type dogs to a hand made turn-of-the-century wood cradle. Old-fashioned marriage certificates continue to be a popular sales item. And there are Italian inlaid tables and marble-topped wash stands, paintings, chandeliers, jewelry pieces, thimbles, brass objects . . . even an Austrian roll-top desk.

Antiques

A real eye-catcher is the fireplace carved of solid cherrywood with a beveled mirror (CA 1900). And to satisfy the present trend of collecting antique dolls, there's a fine selection of European dolls. On the colorful patio outside, there's a unique English grindstone, people-powered by foot.

It was Walt Disney himself who first came up with the idea of an antique shop within the Park. So it must have given him double pleasure to supervise its grand opening on the same day in July, 1966, that New Orleans Square was dedicated. Since then, countless visitors, including many celebrities, have passed through its doors to marvel at the wide selection of exclusive merchandise.

Regarding time and place of origin, quality of craftsmanship and authenticity, any antique purchased in the "One-Of-A-Kind" Shop is guaranteed to be what it purports to be — to the best of the buyers' knowledge.

Although the most recent accepted rule is that an article must be at least 100 years old to qualify as an antique, there's no denying that today many collectibles of a lesser age are considered works of art and a wise investment. With the sky-rocketing costs of wood, it's certain that any furniture of quality hardwood will hold or increase its value.

But whether you're interested in collecting valuable pieces or in finding just the right accessory to add a decorator's touch to your home, you're likely to find what you want in the "One-Of-A-Kind" Antiques Shop, a fun place to browse and shop for the unusual.

A MOUNTAIN RISES IN FLORIDA

The skeptics may have raised an eyebrow or two when the idea for a Walt Disney World Big Thunder Mountain Railroad first surfaced some eight years ago. A mountain in Florida, themed to the Western Gold Rush times would be completely out of its geographical and historical element. Transforming this towering vision into a Magic Kingdom reality was going to require passage through time and space barriers of more than a century and thousands of miles.

But anything is possible when it comes to the diligent Disney imagination. With little more than a sand dune for reference, artists, designers and engineers soon produced renderings, scale models and show plans from which to begin this tremendous project.

This mountain was not to be a duplication of Big Thunder in Disneyland. With more space, less greenery and a flattened terrain, environmental considerations were altogether different. Rather than the castle-peaked Bryce Canyon look of its predecessor, this attraction would resemble Colorado's Monument Valley or the Grand Canyon.

Almost two years were required to construct this monumental showpiece. From the "Top of the World" in the Contemporary Hotel, observers could oversee the progress. Iron rebar was shaped into formation and wire mesh covering filled in the contours. Than came the concrete and rockwork details.

Finally, from five acres of Florida's soft shell and sand flatland rose a magnificent formation of sentinel-type peaks as high as 100 feet. And, so convincing were the rusty hues of weathered and eroded rock, most any distant bystander could be fooled into perceiving a natural element.

Impressive as it was from afar, there was still much to be done. A phosphorescent pool was given rainbows of color. Screeching bats were added to a dark and foreboding cave; water to the waterfall . . . and earthshaking motion to an avalanche.

For decorative tools of the mining trade, Disney prospectors scouted auctions, swap meets and old mining towns. The Disney determination paid off. In rolled an antique ore wagon and skip cart, and soon other artifacts added authenticity to the deserted mine setting.

The great American West was inconveivably born again in an unlikely Florida location — where a "runaway" train transports its brave passengers through a colorful, historical time.

Come experience Big Thunder Mountain Railroad — the newest exciting adventure in the Walt Disney World Magic Kingdom.

CHRISTMAS PARADE

Christmas in the Parks

Disneyland

Disneyland will shine with holiday decorations during the month of December as the Park celebrates its 25th season of Yuletide activities, highlighted by the traditional Christmas Parade. The joyful procession, to be featured usually twice daily from December 20 thru January 4, depicts the color and warmth of the season with toy soldiers, dancing snowpeople and Santa himself in his lofty sleigh adorned with gifts.

With a special guest narrator reading "The First Christmas," the Park's stirring Candlelight Procession on December 20 and 21 will mark the opening of Disneyland's expanded holiday festivities. Over 1,000 carolers blend their voices in what has become a Disneyland custom which began in 1955.

In addition, the Park will complete the Yuletide flavor with bountiful holiday decorations. Traditional wreaths and bright Christmas bells will hang from the doors of Main Street's turn-of-century shops, and a majestic 60-foot tree will stand in Town Square.

At the other end of Main Street, at Sleeping Beauty Castle, two white Christmas trees will stand in the shimmering waters of the castle moat. Strolling throughout the Park, Disneyland's Dickens Carolers will serenade guests with mirthful renditions of the season's favorite melodies. An impressive lineup of musical entertainers performing on various Park stages will round out the holidays.

New Year's Eve, December 31, Disneyland will present a fun-packed night with top-name artists from 8:30 PM to 2:30 AM. Special pre-purchased tickets for this event will entitle holders to unlimited use of Park attractions (except shooting galleries) and all the extra entertainment, at no additional cost.

Walt Disney World

Smartly-dressed elves, cheery carolers, brightly decorated shops and a 65-foot-tall tree help fill the Magic Kingdom of Walt Disney World in Florida with plenty of old-fashioned Christmas spirit.

The holiday mood is most contagious on Main Street, U.S.A., where wreaths and tinseled garlands recapture the flavor of Christmases past, while strolling carolers regale passers-by with joyous holiday favorites. Focal point for these festive trappings is the gigantic Town Square Christmas tree. The towering, 65-foot-tall silver fir is decorated with 3,000 lights, 5,000 ornaments and an array of colorfully wrapped packages, all waiting to be opened on Christmas Day.

Just about everyone catches the spirit, especially during the enchanting Christmas Parade, which can be seen daily from December 20th through January 3rd. Live musicians, marching toy soldiers and dancing reindeer lead the way for Santa, Mrs. Santa and a host of delightful Disney characters.

The Christmas season officially opens the nights of December 13th and 14th, with the inspiring Main Street Candlelight Procession. A massive chorale of more than 1,000 choir-robed singers from individual choral groups throughout the area hold lighted candles, as they form a procession of harmony down Main Street, U.S.A. In Town Square, the members of the chorale form a "Living Christmas Tree," and lift voices in song to accompany the traditional reading of the Biblical Christmas story by a guest narrator. Past guest narrators have included Perry Como, Cary Grant and Rock Hudson.

During the Christmas season, the Magic Kingdom is open daily until midnight, and a spectacular fireworks display fills the sky over Cinderella Castle at 10 p.m. nightly. On New Year's Eve, the park remains open until 2 a.m. for a special party which features extra-special entertainment events.

Park Ambassadors Bid Fond Adieux

Monica Hallecks, Walt Disney World Ambassador

As the 1980 Walt Disney World Ambassador, Monica Hallecks has found her busy schedule of travel and public appearances extremely gratifying. The warmth and friendliness she has encountered as the representative of the 13,000 Vacation Kingdom cast members have helped highlight an unforgettable year.

Looking back on her soon-to-be-completed reign, Monica can relive the exciting memories of visits to such major cities as Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Washington, D.C., where she spread a little Disney sunshine throughout many children's hospitals. Monica's talents as a charming and quick-witted spokesperson were displayed time and again at a variety of Rotary Club presentations, and during a sometimes-hectic schedule of radio and television interviews. She was often accompanied by our famous Disney characters, including the one-and-only Mickey Mouse . . . with whom she shared several "honored guest" spotlights — while meeting such notables as Massachusetts Governor Ed King, author Gay Talese, international singing star Roger Whittaker and popular actress Barbara Eden.

The most exhilarating period of Monica's reign, however, could well have been a summer swing through Canada with the Kids of the Kingdom. Monica's travels covered 1,500 miles, and she gave an average of five radio and TV interviews each day!

As Disney News goes to press, the 11th Walt Disney World Ambassador is in the process of being selected. She also will most certainly experience the pleasure of being welcomed by appreciative thousands, as she carries on the Disney spirit!

Nancy Englert, Disneyland Ambassador

It's been a wonderful silver anniversary year at Disneyland — a year actually celebrated throughout the world. It's been a tribute to 25 happy years of bringing Disney magic to people everywhere.

This sentiment was evident in the many countries I visited while traveling as Ambassador to the Park during our birthday year. The entire year has been an unforgettably rewarding experience.

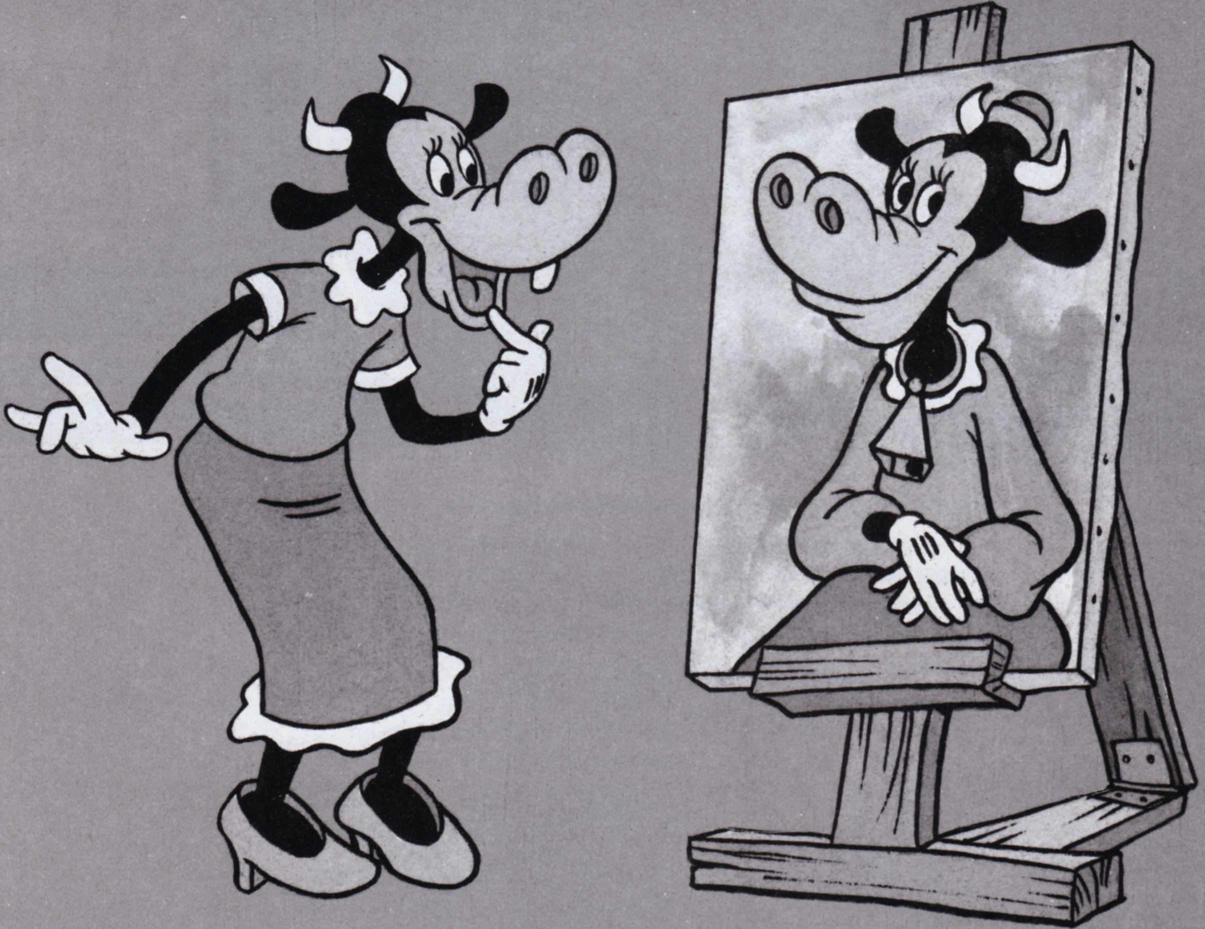
The Rose Parade in Pasadena on January 1 was a sample of the level of excitement that was to continue all year long. Mickey, Minnie, Donald, Pluto, Goofy, The Kids of the Kingdom and I spent the first three months following touring the United States and Canada. At each destination, thousands of enthusiastic fans turned out to see their favorite Disney characters and to applaud the Kids of the Kingdom performances.

In Costa Rica and Mexico, as on all of our journeys, we were invited to visit hospitals, schools and orphanages. Children there showered us with handmade gifts. It was so gratifying to be able to bring a little bit of Disneyland to those who may never have the opportunity to visit the Park in person.

Everywhere we went, officials honored Walt Disney and the occasion of our 25th birthday. They were eager to show just how much Disneyland has meant to them in the past, but more importantly, how much they were looking forward to the next 25 years of Disney entertainment.

There is no doubt in my mind that the 1981 Ambassador should anticipate the approaching year to be just as exciting and filled with unbelievable experiences and memories . . . enough to last a lifetime!

How to Draw
CLARABELLE



Clarabelle Cow is one of the earliest Disney cartoon characters, preceding even Goofy, Pluto, and Donald Duck. She first appeared in "The Plow Boy" in 1929, and became, with her beau Horace Horsecollar, a constant companion of Mickey and Minnie Mouse in their cartoons of the '30's.

Lately in her comic adventures, Clarabelle has become more and more a glamorous heroine, which suits her just fine. Like all stars, she loves to perform, and will sing, dance, or act at the drop of a hat. But there's another side to Clarabelle's character—she's the ideal neighbor, always ready to help a friend in need or work for a worthy cause.

After you've mastered Clarabelle's basic figure and expressions, don't be afraid to experiment and put her in different costumes. Remember: she loves the spotlight.

Putting your game on a steady

With three challenging, 18-hole courses to choose from (the Palm, Magnolia and the Lake Buena Vista course), Walt Disney World guests are finding that the Vacation Kingdom is a Golfer's Kingdom, too! That's especially true for those who long to get beyond the "duffer" stage, because Walt Disney World has made a major commitment to the teaching aspect of the game.

That commitment is evidenced in part by the Walt Disney World Golf Studio. This unique program of one-on-one instruction allows for the fact that no two playing styles are exactly alike. Golfers attending the two-hour session are not locked into a rigid style or stance, but are advised by Studio staff professionals on ways to play better golf in their own individual fashion.

The instruction includes professional analysis of a player's stance, form and style. Then, a videotape replay on the Golf Resort Pro Shop's five-foot color television screen allows the Studio instructor to point out both the strong and weak elements of a player's game, while providing tips on strengthening or correcting those areas. And to keep those pointers well in mind, each player receives a take-home audio cassette of personalized instructions.

Golf director Paul Ritson, a native of South Africa, is a 31-year veteran of golf instruction. His students include PGA Tour superstar Gary Player, LPGA standout Sally Little and numerous other PGA Tour performers. The same principles and techniques he used in teaching these high-caliber performers are employed in the Golf Studio program.

In addition, long-time golf instructor Rina Ritson provides 30-minute, one-on-one golf lessons at the Lake Buena Vista Club course.

The Vacation Kingdom has also extended its teaching reach to young golfers. The Walt Disney World Junior Golf Program, for example, offers intensive, one-week sessions of instruction and play to talented young players between the ages of 11 and 17.

This "swing" to youth was made more evident with the dedication this past October of the "Wee Links" - a prototype golf course situated between the 10th and 14th fairways of the Walt Disney World Magnolia golf course. The six-hole course, which features Mod Sod greens, is the first "link" in a series of PGA Tour-sponsored mini-courses for beginners throughout the country. The PGA Tour's objective is to provide people from all walks of life the opportunity to learn how to play golf at nominal fees. Proceeds from the Walt Disney World National Team Championship Golf Classic Pro-Am in October were donated to the PGA Tour Junior Golf Program.

So, whether you be an oldster, or a youngster - or somewhere in between - the Vacation Kingdom offers you a shot at improving your golf game!

Wanna hear a Juicy Story?

A long time ago (20 years in fact) in a Kingdom far away (well, actually, in Anaheim, California), two renowned names joined together for the noteworthy purpose of providing a thirst-quenching beverage for visitors to the Kingdom.

The marriage of Sunkist and Disneyland was indeed a happy one, both families representing and believing in the natural, wholesome side of life. Main Street, U.S.A., was the perfect setting for their turn of the century "Sunkist Citrus House." And when they opened it to the public in August 1960, guests flocked inside to partake of the naturally sweet, freshly squeezed orange juice and cool lemonade. Thirsty visitors consumed around 250 gallons of orange juice and 50 gallons of lemonade that memorable day. What a reception! There were also fresh lemon pies that seemed to disappear like magic.

Two years later, a cute thatched offspring of this successful union appeared in the darkest jungle of Adventureland. Shades of Dr. Livingstone, they named it "Sunkist, I Presume." Here, explorers who braved the underwater creatures and shadowy dangers of the "Jungle Cruise" came for cool, liquid relief for throats made dry with apprehension! "Jungle Julep," blended from a delightful juicy combination of orange, lemon and guava (with a spritz of grenadine) became the specialty of the hut.

Guests have been returning ever since to each of these cool and welcome respites from their busy days in the Magic Kingdom. For those who require more substantial nourishment than juices, there are frozen yogurt and juice bars, lemon tarts, hot dogs, sandwiches, coffee and donuts that are different.

Day in and day out, the liquid gold that has made both the Golden State and Sunkist famous pours unceasingly from giant juice extractors at the Citrus House at the rate of 70 gallons an hour...serving thirsty Disneyland customers and all of the Park's restaurants.

Now that's a lot of juice. But didn't it make for an enchanting, fantasy-like story?

Home Video

Those families with a video cassette recorder can now program their own Disney film festival.

Available now in retail outlets and directly from Disney are such memorable Disney movies as:

PETE'S DRAGON—a heartwarming musical with something for everyone . . . tender love songs, rousing dances, and an impossible animated creation named Elliott . . . the Dragon. Helen Reddy and Mickey Rooney star in this fanciful tale which combines live action and animation in the tradition of MARY POPPINS.

BLACK HOLE—The USS Cygnus is perched precariously at the edge of the Black Hole . . . the vast empty nothingness where space and time end. An explosive film where robots, humanoids and the extravagant spaceship face the terrifying power of the Black Hole.

MICKEY ON VACATION—A forty-five minute compilation of Mickey's most memorable moments . . . while on holiday. Treat the family to that extra special animation that only Disney provides.

Movies

The schedule of films from Walt Disney Productions for the first half of 1981 promises to be one of the most exciting in years.

Kicking off the year is a Christmas gift for theater patrons all over the country, "The Aristocats," one of the studio's classic animated features. Released for the first time since its debut 10 years ago, it stars the vocal talents of Eva Gabor and Phil Harris.

"The Devil and Max Devlin" arrives in February of 1981 bringing Bill Cosby and Elliott Gould together in a contemporary fantasy of a man trying to save his own soul by selling out to the devil. Along the way there are outstanding performances by Susan Anspach, Adam Rich and a haunting film debut by Julie Budd whose singing style will certainly earn her much attention. Jerry Courtland co-produced and Steven H. Stern directed.

For the Easter season a very, very special film is scheduled. It is "Amy on the Lips," the touching story of a young woman who, having lost her own deaf child, leaves her overbearing husband to spend her life teaching the hard-of-hearing to speak. Jenny Agutter and Barry Newman star in the 1913 period film with Nanette Fabray, Margaret O'Brien, Kathleen Nolan and Lou Fant co-starred. Jerry Courtland produced for executive producer Bill Yates. Vincent McEveety directed.

The studio's summer bill of fare is guaranteed to please the appetite of every film goer.

First up is "Watcher in the Woods," a thrilling suspense story for all ages. A new tantalizing ending has been filmed for this haunting tale about the mystical possession of a teenaged girl. Bette Davis, Carroll Baker, Lynn-Holly Johnson and David McCallum star. Tom Leetch was co-producer and John Hough directed.

Highlight of the summer season is "The Fox and the Hound," Walt Disney Productions' 20th animated feature and the first new animated film in five years. Produced in the classic Disney fashion, "The Fox and the Hound" features the vocal talents of Pearl Bailey, Jack Albertson, Mickey Rooney, Jeanette Nolan, Sandy Duncan, Kurt Russell, Pat Buttram, Paul Winchell and Dick Bakalyan.

Winding up the summer program is "Condorman," a comedy about a comic book writer who assumes his character's identity to help a beautiful Russian agent escape the Iron Curtain. Starring Michael Crawford, Oliver Reed and Barbara Carrera, the film was photographed in Paris, Monte Carlo, Switzerland and London. Jan Williams co-produced for director Charles Jarrott.

In preparation is "Night Crossing," the suspenseful recounting of the daring escape by balloon of two families from East Germany to the west. Oscar winner Delbert Mann ("Marty") will direct the film starring John Hurt ("Elephant Man"), Jane Alexander and Beau Bridges. Tom Leetch will co-produce.

Ron Miller is executive producer on all Disney films.

Music and Records

Disneyland Records will add three exciting new titles to their popular Songtape line. Yankee Doodle Mickey, Goin' Quackers! and Pardners will be released on long-playing cassettes with a full-color sing-along book.

Science fiction is today's most popular theme, in movies, television and on records. Now, from Disneyland Records comes The Sounds of Outerspace. Hear laser battles, alien creatures, meteor storms, pulsars, space cruisers, robots and much, much more.

Look for the Aristocats Storyteller album to be released in time for Christmas. The fun and magic of this Disney classic animated feature has been captured in this beautiful book-record set.

Programming for the entire family rather than specifically for children will be emphasized as "Disney's Wonderful World" begins its 27th year of television.

"Amy-On-The Lips," a period drama about a young woman who flees her domineering husband to teach hearing-impaired children, is one of the season's original films.

Another is "The Ghosts of Buxley Hall" — a two-hour comedy about the founder of a 100-year-old military academy for boys who literally awakens from the dead when he discovers his school is going coeducational.

Making their television premiers will be "Old Yeller," "The Best of Walt Disney's True Life Adventures," and "Follow Me, Boys," starring Fred MacMurray.
